In the outskirts of Niraton, a small family of 4 makes their living by farming their land. As a boy, Norman has looked up at the stars with extreme curiosity and wonder. He was always eager to learn in school, but would often times drift away imagining the world back when the cosmic rain. 14 years ago (age 10), while Norman was stargazing in his families field before bed, he thought he saw a new star in the sky. It kept increasing, and increasing in size, getting brighter and brighter. A small meteor was crashing its way towards Nira. Norm rushed over to his neighbors field to find a small, smoldering, and burnt meteorite nestled into the dirt. He scrambled home shouting excitedly for his family. His father (Levi) and mother (Alida) insisted on leaving it outside, but Norm didn't want to let it go. The meteorite called to norm Norm as if it destined for him, so he slept next to it under the stars kept warm by its heat. The sun rose and it had cooled off enough to bring into town to ask the town librarian all he knows. Kethic Venherebrand showed great interest in the meteor, but even more so in Norm as a pupil. Over the next 10 years, Norm studied with Kethic; both learning from him and from literature from all over Nira. There are those that treat the sprites as deities, as something divine, however Norm was raised in Kethic's academic tradition. The sprites are external beings with whom we share this realm. We existed in symbiosis with eachother until something happened to the sprites. They did not foresake us as they were never our god. But what happened to them is a mystery to everyone.

At 20, Norm commissioned the blacksmith Sigrun to fashion his now treasured meteorite into an amulet, and through great practice and concentration on weave of cosmic magic, he was able to summon a familiar out of the amulet using the energy charged into it by the stars. His life since he was 10 has revolved around studying the prevailing theories of the sprites, and theorizing himself what happened. Then the Blight returned. Norms sister Maaika was summoned to the front lines to fight (paladin), while Norm found himself in the situation room far from the front lines but still way out of his depth. Any knowledge regarding the history of the cosmic rain, sprites, protector goddess, or the sage was deemed crucial in the fight against the second blight. Norm and Kethic stayed safe away from the front lines, providing expertise in history and the arcane. Maaika survived, but her convictions grew ever more theological after the war. (there is room for interaction and character conflict with her. Or having her as an ally).

Since the war, Norm has had his head down studying what happened with a new lens and with new information. Since these breakthroughs, he has discovered the ability to pull on the cosmic energy to harness its magic for casting. He casts the spells from his book that he carries in a cross body holster. He is in the beginning stages of discovering more secrets and connections. He knew a druid who had dedicated his life to the moon, despite never having seen it himself. Through Bjorn, he picked up a couple of druidic spells (druid magic initiate all of the spells were spells that bjorn knew too).

Relations:

- Father: Levi Vela, farmer, 60ish years old. Relationship is slightly strained as a bookworm is not the future he imagined for his son.
- Mother: Alida Vela, farmer, 60ish years old. It feels like she loves Norm a bit more than maaika, and it makes both norm and maaika uncomfortable.
- Sister: Maaika, 27yo, farmer turned soldier in green dragons following the second blight. Paladin. Believes sprites to be divine, in contrast to Norm. They still love each other and get along, but have sibling banter (+maybe goes deeper) about their thoughts. Polar opposites in almost every regard.
- Town connections:
    - Kethic Venherebrand: teacher/mentor, more of a father figure than his own dad. Very close.
    - Harris Pire: comes to Norm with questions, asks him to do research for him as favors. Norm is aware that Harris works with the law from time to time, but has decided to not ask any further questions regarding the nature of Harris's work. They are colleagues.

State of Norm as of campaign start:

Appearance:

- 24yo
- 5'9, 140lb
- white, but noticably pale.
- Eyes growing up were green, but since he was 10 and found the meteorite, they have been a dark blue.
- Hair is light brown, slightly strawberry blonde hair(milo from atlantis).

- His physique is very twinky, like skinny, but some okay very tone muscle.
- He is a Human male.
- He wears large round glasses from spending so much time reading. Has an amulet that we never takes off that has a small chunk of meteorite, and has a cross body holster for his book.

1. What additional attributes would be noticed upon meeting the character (i.e. speech, mannerisms, etc.)?
    a. He is very naïve, he tends to speak a bit fast in his sentences, and spends a lot of time in his own head.
2. Who are your parents?
    a. Levi and Alida Vela. Farmers.
3. Do you have any other family or friends?
    a. I have a sister, Maaika(ma-eek-uh), who is a paladin as of the second blight. My only friend is Kethic the librarian.
4. What is your character's alignment?
    a. Neutral good
5. What is your character's moral code?
    a. Generally rule utilitarian. He is a very high int, medium wisdom character. A more wise character would follow care ethics, but he is very book smart in conversations and actions.
6. Does your character have goals?
    a. Discover what the sprites really are, the truth behind the sage and the protector spirit. He is set to discover the truth and learn through exploration.
7. What drives your characters goal(s) or lack thereof?
    a. It has been a lifelong pursuit of his. The meteorite he found set him on the path of discovery.
8. Is your character religious?

    a. NO, in fact he thinks that "god" is just some decently powerful alien.

9. Does your character have any personality quirks (i.e. anti-social, arrogant, optimistic, paranoid)?
    a. He is generally well adjusted, he just gets very excited about anything related to lore. He is very particular about a lot of things. Those will come up in the campaign.
10. How does your character view his/her role as an adventurer?
    a. He views himself as the party's academic and lore department. He is not combat oriented, so most of his spells and utility are useful outside of combat.
11. How does your character get along with others?
    a. He is very amicable, but is not great with first impressions. He holds everyone he meets in high regards, so his trust and view of people are "frequently" shattered.
12. Is there anything that your character hates?
    a. He hates the idea that the sprites and sage have "foresaken" us. He firmly believes that to not be the case.
13. Is there anything that your character fears?
    a. Not necessarily fears, but he has not seen bloodshed. He has avoided combat of any kind, and is sheltered. For the first couple of levels, he will not have a pleasant reaction to having to kill things or people.
14. Is there anything that your character loves?
    a. He loves finding new books or tomes. Learing new spells or lore. He loves cream cheese Danishes with not too much cheese, and cupcakes with minimal frosting because they are too sweet.
